

Lindsay, CA, January 1, 2010-HGCentral.com has gone through a major overhaul. At its inception in September 2009 HGCentral.com was a general portal site. With links to other websites that detail the services provided by entrepreneur Hector G. Castanon. Effective as of today HGCentral.com has been converted into a online shopping Mall. Those original service websites are still linked to HGCentral.com but the main purpose of the newly remodeled site is to cater to the online shopper.

With numerous advertisers coming on board and many more to be added in the near future. “HGCentral.com will soon become your personal online shopping mall,” Castanon says. Very well known retailers such as WalMart, Kohls, Sears and Kmart are already available to access from the site. The goal is to provide a one stop site for just about every online shopper. Even more so for the shopper that can't stand fighting traffic and pushing through inconsiderate crowds at the local malls and stores.

Auto, Apparel, Computer, Electronics, Financial Services, Gifts and Travel are just a few of the many categories that are already at the site. With many more to be added along the way. Furthermore, at HGCentral.com the online shopper will be able to sign up to receive updates on many promotional offers and special deals that the advertisers offer periodically. Many of these deals are “online only” promotions. You won't find these deals at the local store.

Go to HGCentral.com today and find out what else is offered, including the daily special deals. Where items will be listed everyday and available at a special discounted prices, sometimes even free.
